

Holiday challenge!

As many of you know, Whitehill School, has now turned 50 years old and there have been various celebrations and mementos of this occasion over the last year.

One of these, is that Mr Mills has commissioned a painting to be done of the school by an ex pupil, Velvet Cooper, who has recently graduated from Art College.

This got us thinking about how Velvet would have artistically represented the school when she was here in the juniors, and in turn made us wonder what the current pupils could do.

Your challenge over the holidays is to paint, draw, paper cut, collage or print our school, in any style, medium or way you like! You can choose to represent the whole building or a part of it that is special to you.

Here are some examples of how people have represented buildings but you are free to use your imagination.

In September, we would love to see these pictures and find a way to share and display them for everyone to see. Who knows, in a few years we could be commissioning you to make something for the school 😊

We wish you all a happy summer break together and look forward to seeing what you have made in September.
